

Not just another dive

THE PROVIDENCE JOURNAL / BOB THAYER

Lisa Kellner, an artist from New York City, works on her installation, "Inner Urban Sanctum," in a storefront window on Westminster Street in Providence yesterday. Artists from Rhode Island and around the country are installing their works in storefront windows all over downtown Providence in preparation for Thursday's Gallery Night. Kellner's work "peels back the layers of a constructed persona to reveal what lies underneath," she says in the show literature. Providence Art Windows is sponsored by the Providence Foundation, and includes installations along Westminster, Eddy, Empire, Washington and other downtown streets. Each window will show each artist's creation, using materials from cloth to ceramics to wood and cardboard. The windows will be ready for Gallery Night Thursday, and will be on display until Nov. 21.
